

Tim Lambert THSC Bio

Tim Lambert, president of the Texas Home School Coalition (now celebrating its twentieth anniversary), has been involved in home school leadership in Texas for over twenty years. He and his wife Lyndsay taught their four now-grown children at home for sixteen years, graduating the last two in 2000.

Tim publishes the Texas Home School Coalition Review magazine, now in its tenth year, which reaches over 60,000 Texas home school families on a quarterly basis. As the head of the state home school organization for the leading home school state in the country, he is recognized as an authority on home education issues in Texas. In this capacity, he has testified before numerous Texas legislative committees on issues related to home schooling. He often deals with state government agencies, including the Texas Education Agency and Texas Department of Family and Protective Services, on home education issues and has served as an expert witness on home education in a number of court cases. He has often addressed such conferences as the Texas Association of Collegiate Registrars and Admissions Officers on the topic.

Tim holds a BA in political science from Texas Tech University and is active in the political arena, having served eight years as Republican National Committeeman for Texas. He is committed to serving the home school community and protecting parents' right to choose the education of their children.
