

Tim and Lyndsay Lambert Bio

Tim Lambert is the president of the Texas Home School Coalition. He and his wife Lyndsay each hold a degree from Texas Tech University in Lubbock, where they met. The Lamberts have been married and lived in Lubbock for over 30 years. They have four adult children who all graduated from their home school.

In 1986 Tim began serving on the Advisory Board of the Texas Home School Coalition Political Action Committee (THSC PAC), and in 1990 he was asked to lead THSC, now an incorporated educational organization. In that capacity, he speaks to various groups around Texas, helps inform the public, legislators, and candidates about home education, and trains home school leaders in public relations and political activities. Tim, who holds a degree in political science, is active in the political arena and is committed to serving the home school community and protecting parents' right to choose the education of their children.

Lyndsay has assisted Tim in serving the home school community, first in helping to start and lead their local support group and, since 1990, in running the Texas Home School Coalition. As director of special projects for THSC, Lyndsay oversees special events, is the editor of the Texas Home School Coalition Review, and coordinates the publications of THSC. Her strongest desire, however, is to encourage home school moms and support group leaders in the work that they are doing.
